Planned-Overs... Make-Ahead Entree

"What's in a name?" Everything. Somehow, leftovers are much tastier when they're called "planned-overs," and with a little ingenuity, you can turn planned-overs into Saucy Rice-Scallop Croquettes.

The planned-over in this case is rice combined with scallops. Yes—rice. Rice keeps well in the refrigerator for about a week. Just put it in a tightly closed container so the grains will not dry out or absorb other food flavors. The next time you prepare rice, make an extra amount for future use in this croquette recipe.

Busy homemakers will also appreciate the fact that this recipe can be prepared ahead of time. Early in the day, combine the ingredients, form the mixture into croquettes and chill until about 10 minutes before mealtime. Then, fry, drain and they're ready to serve. Hot mustard or tartar sauce makes a spicy accompaniment.

SAUCY RICE-SCALLOP CROQUETTES

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1/2 cup finely chopped onions | 2 teaspoons salt |
| 3 tablespoons butter or margarine | 1/4 teaspoon pepper |
| 1 pound scallops, finely chopped | 2 teaspoons lemon juice |
| 3 tablespoons flour | 2 cups cooked rice |
| 1/2 cup milk | 1 egg, slightly beaten |
| | 2 tablespoons water |
| | bread crumbs |

Saute onions in butter until soft but not brown. Add scallops and cook 3 to 4 minutes. Blend in flour. Add milk, salt and pepper. Cook until thickened. Remove from heat; add rice and lemon juice. Chill. Form into 12 croquettes. Mix water and egg. Dip croquettes in egg mixture. Roll in crumbs. Chill several hours. Fry croquettes in deep fat 375 degrees, 3 to 4 minutes.

Serve with hot mustard or tartar sauce. Makes 6 servings.

MEETING OF PARENTS AND FRIENDS OF HANDICAPPED & RETARDED CHILDREN

Latest developments in the field of teaching aphasic children were demonstrated by Mrs. James M. Pasquill with her daughter, Sandy, age 6, at a meeting of Parents and Friends of Handicapped and Retarded Children held at her home on Juniper Street, Mattapoisett.

Mrs. Pasquill is an instructor at the Boston School for the Deaf at Randolph where her daughter is a student. Sandy started last year on a part-time basis. This year, she attends a daily class. Mrs. Pasquill also teaches a few children at home on a limited schedule.

Sandy is classed as a receptive aphasic which indicates she doesn't understand what is said to her. She also has the additional handicap of having a hearing problem in both ears. The term aphasia is a language disability.

word is made into a picture and then color is added. Also taught at the school are gymnastics and dancing to drum sounds. Sandy was very co-operative, and was rewarded with a drawing of her favorite pet, a turtle, made by her mother.

Mrs. Pasquill noted that emphasis is made for the children to sit with their hands folded and their feet crossed while sitting and hands at their sides while standing. This created a mood for more effective teaching.

Also attending as guests were Charles Tate, teacher of Dyslexic children at Memorial School in Rochester, and Miss Pamela Seeley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Seeley, Acushnet Road, Mattapoisett. Pamela, a sophomore at Old Rochester Regional High School, is interested in becoming a teacher of Special Education. She informed the group that she was a member of the Teachers Club at the high school and expected to sit-in with a class at the Retarded Center in New Bedford as part of her training.

A new member, Mrs. Joseph Blair of Marion, told the group the help her son, age 6, had obtained from the Institute for the Achievement of Human Potential in Chestnut Hill, Pa. This clinic is famous for the use of the Doman Delacato method of patterning children for rehabilitation when other methods have failed. Mrs. Blair plans to discuss this method further at a future meeting.

The Tower of Strength

"HISTORY OF FORT PHOENIX"

by Donald R. Bernard

Part IX

Following the battle at the head of the river, the British troops moved eastward across the bridge in North Fairhaven, now called Acushnet. Once again the local Tory leading this raiding party was Eldad Tupper, a big asset to the American adversaries, who was very quick in pointing out the house owned by Colonel Edward Pope. This house was soon to be engulfed in flame. Next was the house of Thomas Crandon, who was actively identified with the Continental Army and his house was also marked for destruction. This house can be placed as about the fifth house over the Rivers End Bridge on the south side of the road. The house situated at the top of the hill near Parting Ways was the home belonging to Stephen West which was consumed in short order. A grocery store, owned by Obed Hathaway, was located on the east side of the highway at about four hundred feet north of the present town line. The informer, Tupper, knew that several of the Hathaways were serving in the American Army, thereby becoming prime targets of the ravaging force. The British march continued south along Main to the junction of today's Adams and Main Streets. At this location on the east side of Adams at about the site where John Cooke's house stood (the Cooke of Mayflower fame) was the house of Bartholomew West. This structure too met the fate. The raiders continued their plunder south along the present Adams Street to Sconticut Ned.

Meanwhile, at the Fort at Nolscot Point, on that day, the fifth of September, 1778, the enemy transports had anchored to the east of the Fort near the marsh, which today we place in about the vicinity of the

The discharge of the British and Hessian troops began. Upon reaching the shore, their light horse and artillery soon became bogged down in the marsh, making it very difficult for an effective landing. In the meantime, the Fort, which was watching their movements very closely, opened fire with two shots from their cannon at the troops that were landing. The Fort's garrison, knowing very well that they were hopelessly outnumbered and unable to curb such a large force, decided to withdraw and abandon the Fort and fight a harrassing type of action until help could arrive from Howland's Ferry. The local garrison started their withdrawal to a place behind a low stonewall. A trail of gun powder was then placed from the magazine to the platform and on to the outer perimeter of the Fort. The Fort's eleven cannon were spiked by the local forces and were rendered useless. The British, after having received two cannon shots from the enclosure sitting on top of the ledge, opened with a heavy return of cannon fire from both frigate escorts. Also assisting was the flagship H.M.S. Carysfort with her thunderous twenty-eight guns.

After sustained heavy cannon fire the British ships ceased their fire at the Fort because the Americans failed to return their fire from within the ramparts. With the Fort's colors still flying, the British sup-

But, the local garrison had amassed along a low stonewall awaiting to discover the exact position of the enemy, in which case, they could make good their escape from the area successfully. However, they were soon to be discovered by their invading foe, who in turn fired a heavy volley at the retreating company. One musket shot found its mark by wounding a man by the name of Robert Crossman. This shot passed through one wrist and across the other. The remainder of the American company fled in all directions in a very unmilitary fashion. The British failed to pursue the Americans, because the exact position and strength of the Americans was not known.

The entire garrison, with the exception of Robert Crossman, the wounded man, and John Skiff and his father, was taken prisoner.

The British, upon entrance to the Fort, were being led by David Scott of the Royal Regi-

ASTRONAUTS

TRAIN IN SIMULATED SPACE SHIPS

With the Link Lunar Mission Simulator (LMS), above, and its counterpart the Apollo Mission Simulator, it is possible to simulate the entire manned Apollo missions. The equipment was built by the Link Division of The Singer Company.

American astronauts soar to the moon many times before they ever land there—but they won't necessarily leave the ground during any of their trips.

Many of their journeys will be inside giant simulators that are exact replicas of the Apollo and Lunar ships.

The simulators, weighing 40 tons, and measuring about 30 feet in height, 65 feet in width, and 100 feet in length, were built specifically for the space program by the Link Division of The Singer Company.

Located at both Cape Kennedy and the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Texas, the simulators will not only be used to train the men to use the complicated control panels, but they will acclimate them to unusual space conditions.

And with their five-ton glass covering, they will treat the astronauts to a spectacle of shining stars, the earth and the moon.

Not every trip however, will be smooth sailing, since emergency as well as normal flight conditions have been programmed into the giant computers — so capable they can solve 20 problems a second.

More than 1,000 possible malfunctions also are programmed to forewarn and teach astronauts about potential difficulties.

ment of Artillery. They destroyed the ramrods, sponges, etc. They then applied a slow match to the magazine, not knowing that the Americans left a trail of powder. A spark came in contact with it and prematurely exploded the magazine, killing a British soldier. At least the fragments of a gun, cap and other articles were found nearby a short time later.

Rochester Woman's Club

Mrs. Margaret Benner showed movies of Hong Kong, Thailand, Las Vegas, Yellowstone National Park, Canada, Rochester and a New York zoo at the regular monthly meeting of Rochester Woman's Club.

Mrs. Everett Hardy was hostess chairman, assisted by Mrs. Janice Kirby and Mrs. Fred Church.

Mrs. Everett Hardy announced the annual antique show will be held April 19, 20 and 21st.

The next regular meeting will be February 5th, at which time the Historical Society of Rochester will present a program.

During training, however, instructors can return computers to predetermined mission points — so astronauts can rework problems — or they can speed them up during those periods in the flight when astronauts have little to do.

The actual 14-day flight includes 9 stages: launch boost, earth orbit, translunar coast, lunar orbit, descent, lunar stay, ascent, rendezvous, and docking.

By the time the astronauts count down in late 1969, they will have experienced each stage of the flight. Though it seems amazing, rocketing to the moon may just feel a bit old hat.

U. S. astronaut John W. Young, wearing pressurized suit, is shown in the Apollo Mission Simulator.

???

Dr. Quizmee, our information specialist, answers your questions in this column. Complete, illustrated, 25-volume sets of Funk & Wagnalls Standard Reference Encyclopedia go this week to:

Mark Greiner who asked: "What is the world's longest mountain range?"

On land, it is the Himalaya-Karakoram which extends about 1,500 miles from the Indus River to the Brahmaputra River. Below the ocean, it is the mid-Atlantic range which extends 7,000 miles.

Kevin Hall, whose question is:

"Do ostriches really bury their heads in sand when frightened?"

No, this is strictly a myth. An ostrich can run as fast as 25 miles per hour and has very powerful legs which he uses to defend himself. With that kind of equipment, who needs to hide his head?

THANK YOU

Mr. Toussaint of 7 County Road, Mattapoisett extends his grateful thanks to the people of Mattapoisett and Marion who responded so generously to the aid of his wife who is very ill. Mrs. Norma Toussaint is a patient at Union Hospital in New Bedford and has required many transfusions of blood. Donors from the two towns have come to her aid by giving blood which is so appreciated.

Mr. Toussaint would also like to thank all of the thoughtful people who have sent cards and flowers to his wife.

YWCA

Mr. A. B. Cabral, speaker of the Travel Club Friday evening, will tell about his tour last summer that included nine countries of Europe. As photography is Mr. Cabral's hobby, members and guests may be assured that the slides selected to illustrate his travelog from the 300 taken will be outstanding, showing scenes in London, Paris, Amsterdam and into Germany by the Rhine, to Koln and Munich, and through the Alps to Venice. Florence, Rome and Milan were visited, and then the party went on to Geneva, Switzerland. Mr. Cabral spent two days in Spain, leaving for home from Lisbon. Guests and prospective members are welcome.

Plans for trips in January and February will be discussed at the business meeting
